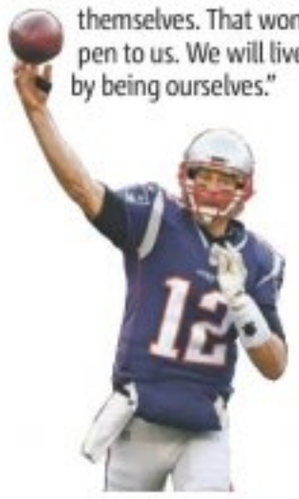
SUPER BOWL LII

EVAN MACY, SPORTS EDITOR

Is it just dumb luck? After an unexpected confluence of events, I landed in Minneapolis yesterday to cover the Eagles in Super Bowl LII. None of those words make sense to me. They are still abstractions from my aspirational days wishing, someday, to be in the center of the sports world, reporting on my hometown team. Whether it was Patrick Robinson's interception against the Falcons, Carson Wentz with an out-of-nowhere MVP season (yes, he's the MVP) or the rule of large numbers (this is only the Eagles' third Super Bowl appearance), I am one of the more than 5,000 journalists covering the game. We proudly present our preview of the game throughout this paper. Look for more all weekend long on metro.us/sports.

PRESSURE TOM BRADY

1 It's no secret that one of New England's biggest weaknesses is their offensive line. A lack of consistent protection for the 40-year-old signal-caller hasn't cost the Pats all that much, as he has one of the quickest releases in football. But few defensive lines have the talent and depth that the Eagles do. "Don't be playing to lose," Brandon Graham, key to the Eagles pass rush, said. "You hear about him coming back, but it's because people get out of being themselves. That won't happen to us. We will live or die by being ourselves."



KEEP THE FOOTBALL

2 Anyone who saw the Patriots comeback against the Jaguars two weeks ago has had their fear of Brady's heroics awakened again. Like he's done so many times in the playoffs, Brady was able to drive the Patriots down the field twice in the fourth quarter in that game to close a 10-point gap. If the game is within reach and New England has the ball, the game will never be over — making it even more important for Philly to run the ball, control the clock and limit turnovers. Doug Pederson's ability to manage time outs and make good decisions will be amplified to the highest level of scrutiny Sunday night. "Sometimes people do stick to what they know," cornerback Jalen Mills said of recent Patriots comebacks. "And sometimes it's him doing what he does."

THE GRONK FACTOR

3 It's widely assumed that Rob Gronkowski, the league's top tight end and the Patriots' leading receiver, will play Sunday. He's practiced in a limited role despite being in the concussion protocol — after a huge hit he took against Jacksonville. And on Thursday afternoon, it was reported he was cleared to play, and he addressed the media for the first time. "I really wasn't worried. I knew I'd be back," he said. If he's on the field, the matchup problems will make things tough for the Eagles' defense. Making sure he's attended to at all times will be of utmost importance when the Patriots have the ball.

GETTY IMAGES

SAME OLD DEFENSE

4 The Eagles' stout defense was on full display when the team dismantled the Vikings 38-7 two weeks ago and will need to be at its best again to best the Patriots. Philly has been able to combine a solid pass defense and intense pass rush to make timely big plays — as key turnovers from backup role players Chris Long, Patrick Robinson and Derek Barnett helped lift them against Minnesota. With contributions like that relieving the efforts of centerpieces Fletcher Cox, Ronald Darby and others, the D is a fearsome unit and one that could give the Patriots fits.

ENJOY THIS

5 It's happened just twice in 51 years, and even though the Eagles are in spectacular shape to compete well beyond 2017-18, a trip to the Super Bowl should not be taken for granted — by the players or by the fans. The entire sports-loving world will be paying attention to the Birds and to the city of Philadelphia on Sunday. Anyone born after 1960 still is waiting to call themselves NFL champions, and the experience of being a Super Bowl winner brings euphoria the city has never experienced before. "I'm probably going to shed a tear," Mychal Kendricks said. A lot of other Eagles fans probably will too.

FANS, FORMER PLAYERS, PROUD PHILADELPHIANS DESERVE TO BE CHAMPS

GLEN MACNOW

Glen Macnow has been an outspoken voice in Philly sports for nearly three decades. @realglenmacnow

I used to have a caller to my WIP show named Scoop from Folsom when I worked with Jody McDonald in the mid-'90s. A World War II vet. Big Chuck Bednarik fan. Archetype lifelong Eagles backer.

"Just give me one Super Bowl win, boys," Scoop joked during most of his calls. "Then I can die happy."

I haven't heard from Scoop in years now. My hope is that he's still walking this Earth.

I want the Eagles to win Super Bowl LII for Scoop from Folsom.

I want them to win it for every green-bleeding fan who watched every season since 1960 end in disappointment – and then came back for more. For the folks who filled Franklin Field, and then the Vet and now Lincoln Financial Field, always believing that this year, finally, would be THE year.

Win this one for Brent Celek, the longest-tenured local athlete, of whom owner Jeff Lurie once said, "He's what a Philadelphia Eagle looks like." Celek realizes more than any teammate how hard it is to get where the team is now. And he knows he may not get another chance.

Win it for David Graff. He's my 14-year-old nephew, still at the age where his idealism hasn't given way to good old Philly cynicism. Every kid deserves that championship season. When I was 12, my favorite team won a world title and I can still recite every player and every jersey number. An Eagles Super Bowl would create memories that will make David smile when he's 80.

Win it for Jon Dorenbos. "Nobody knows the long snapper," he once told me. That one, we knew. Dorenbos performed his magic and made friends here for 11 seasons before being traded and then undergoing heart surgery. He deserves a share of our joy.

Win it for Ray Didinger. My friend and radio partner likes to pretend he gave up his fandom when he became a well-respected analyst, but I see through that fib. Ray recently recalled watching the 1960 Eagles title win with his grandfather. At the end, Ray looked up and saw the old man crying for the first time ever. Not sure we'll ever see the evidence, but it won't surprise me if a win Sunday causes Ray's eyes to well up.

Win it for Betty Lou. I need someone in here to represent the 45 percent of football fans who are women. Betty Lou is a lovely older lady at my gym who wears her Eagles necklace year-round. Recently she showed me ticket stubs from the 1980 and 2004 Super Bowls. She can't travel to this one, but she'll be screaming from her living room.

Win it for Andre Waters. And Reggie White. And Jerome Brown. And Buddy Ryan, and every other past player and coach who proudly wore the green and white (or silver) and is no longer alive to share our joy. I raise a toast to all of them.

Win it for Merrill. No last name needed here. By my estimate, the voice of the Eagles has lovingly, passionately and sometimes critically called close to 850 games over his career – without getting that payoff moment that play-by-play guys live for. We all remember Gene Hart's countdown to the Stanley Cup in 1974, and Harry Kalas' "swing and a miss!" call on Brad Lidge's final pitch of the 2008 World Series. I want that Merrill moment – for him and us.

Win it for Brian Dawkins. The all-time most popular Eagle's weekend should start Saturday with an announcement that he has been named to the Pro Football Hall of Fame, and end Sunday night with ecstasy and confetti and Doug Pederson hoisting the Lombardi Trophy.

Our great city will never be the same.

Metro readers share reasons why they want an Eagles win

On page 4, Metro columnist Glen Macnow (otherwise known as the Philly Sports Professor) wrote a heartfelt article as the Eagles Super Bowl LII matchup against the Patriots approaches. When Macnow posted the story on social media, he asked readers to tell us "for whom you'd like to see the Eagles win."

Below is a sampling of some of the best and most moving replies we received:

Philly residents have many reasons why they are excited about the Eagles. GETTY IMAGES

J. Terry McGrath: Outstanding article, Glen. Your writing has always brought me to smiles and reflection. As you know, I have been going to Eagles games since 1964 and owned season tickets for 45 years and for more than two decades I have sat in front of Stan Forman (in his 80s) and his daughter Sondra. Stan has had season tickets for 60 years now. He has watched my daughters grow up and his kindness knows no boundaries. I hope the Eagles win it for all of us — but especially Stan!

Lorry Filson: Win it for my mom, my role model as a woman and as a sports fan. I've watched sports with her since I was small, on a little black and white, fuzzy-screened TV in the den. She passed in 2007. I wore a necklace of hers to the [World Series] parade in '08, and I'll wear it on Sunday. I'm in Florida now and can't be in Pennsylvania for the festivities, but my heart is there with Philly!

Dan Moritz: Win it for my dad. His birthday was on Monday, and my family placed his Eagles hat on his gravesite. He would have loved this team.

Vince LaRosa: You should be proud of this one great article, Glen Macnow. I want to win this one for my father, Bob LaRosa, who wants to see just one. We recently moved just outside of Boston, and my 7-year-old son proudly wears his Eagles shirts to school amongst a sea of blue this week. FLY, FLY!

Sarah Chaga Crispin: I want them to win it for my dad and my husband; I vividly remember being with my dad when the Phillies won. He's an emotional guy by nature, but there was just something special in his eyes. It's a moment we will always have together. My husband watched the last Eagles Super Bowl appearance in a TV room at Marine Corps Base Camp Lejeune the month before he left for Iraq. His dad flew down so that they could share in the moment; that one didn't happen for them, but this time, as we're all gathered in our living room around the fold-up table full of far too much Nick's Roast Beef, my mother-in-law's ribs, and my mom's mac and cheese, I really hope it does.

PSPCA 'underdog' pups show Eagles support

sam.newhouse@metro.us

These adoptable dogs are cheering on the Eagles in Super Bowl LII.

The Eagles have been considered underdogs this season for a variety of reasons, but heading into Sunday's Super Bowl the team and its fans have embraced the term with dog masks and dogs on T-shirts.

Now real, adoptable dogs from the PSPCA are returning the favor by wearing custom Eagles gear. A group of pups showed off underdog-themed Eagles dog jackets, designed by Boathouse, during a canine fashion show Thursday at the PSPCA's Erie Avenue headquarters.

PSPCA staff sang the Eagles fight song and brought dogs in the Eagles gear out to take on a dog obstacle course during the event.

"The real underdogs in the city of Philadelphia aren't the Eagles, but rather the dogs rescued from cruelty and neglect who are searching for a second chance at the loving homes they have always deserved," the PSPCA said. "This week, visit our Facebook, Twitter and Instagram pages to learn about these true underdogs, and support our efforts to turn them into the superdogs they have always been!"

Through Feb. 8, Boathouse is also giving away Eagles dog jackets to customers who donate $75 to the PSPCA.

TAILGATING

No tailgating at the Super Bowl

Tailgating is sacred to Eagles fans: Drinking beers and barbecuing outside the Linc before an Eagles game is for some fans as much of a part of the tradition as the sport itself.

But come Super Bowl LII in Minnesota, there won't be any tailgating around the stadium allowed.

"No, this will be a very contained, secured perimeter area," Minneapolis Police Chief Medaria Arradondo told the Inquirer. "So the traditional Philly tailgate, unfortunately, unless they do it by the hotels, we don't see any. And that's for the Patriots fans, too. There's just going to be so much going on in front of U.S. Bank Stadium."

U.S. Bank Stadium acknowledges on its website that "tailgating is part of the U.S. Bank Stadium guest experience."

But increased security for the Super Bowl LII makes that impossible, city leaders said. NFL security chief Cathy Lanier told the Inquirer that fans could potentially tailgate outside the nearby Mall of America, where security "prescreening" will be offered for fans boarding the light rail directly to the stadium.

Other pre-game party options include the Players Tailgate, a charitable dinner attended by 25 NFL athletes and this year hosted by celeb chef Guy Fieri.

Joel Kinnaman as Takeshi Kovacs in Netflix's "Altered Carbon". NETFLIX

The cold bleak future of 'Altered Carbon'

A world where death is just the beginning? File under: highly streamable.

Today, Netflix premieres the wildly ambitious, futuristic neo-noir "Altered Carbon" — a series that will surely have you binging hard through the weekend. Based on the cyberpunk novel by Richard K. Morgan, "Altered Carbon" takes place 300 years in the future, in a world where human consciousness can be uploaded into a brand-new body (aka a "sleeve") when you die.

The series tells the tale of once-defected military officer Takeshi Kovacs, now born into a brand-new sleeve (played by Joel Kinnaman) after he was killed in a fiery shootout with the police hundreds of years earlier. Kovacs quickly learns that he was brought back into the world by wealthy businessman Laurens Bancroft (James Purefoy) in order to investigate — wait for it — Bancroft's own death.

From there, the show moves at a relentless pace, following Kovacs through this near-dystopian future as he discovers the gruesome circumstances of Bancroft's murder. He's joined by a group of misfits of varying degrees, including fiery policewoman Kristin Ortega (Martha Higareda), with whom he forges an unlikely partnership in order to find out what's what.

Kinnaman shines as the brooding Kovacs, a man outside of his own time, operating in an unfamiliar world and a new body. It's the kind of role the "Suicide Squad" actor was born to play. His magnetic charisma keeps your attention, whether he's mumbling perfect one-liners in a molasses-slow drawl or putting his fists through everyone who stands between him and the truth.

The world of "Altered Carbon" that creator Laeta Kalogridis has built is similar to both the grimy sprawl of "Blade Runner" and the ruthless, class-divided society of the "Hunger Games" series. Every piece of scenery has something more to it than meets the eye, giving the show a caustic yet vibrant feel to it.

But beware: "Altered Carbon" does have an extremely complex plot-line and can be hard to follow at times. Don't let that get in your way, though. Once you give the show some time to dig its claws into you, they'll be in there for the entire series.

"Altered Carbon" premieres Friday, Feb. 2 on Netflix.

"On Body And Soul"

Director: Ildikó Enyedi
Stars: Géza Morcsányi, Alexandra Borbély
Rating: N/R

For most of its opening act "On Body and Soul" feels lost. While it establishes the isolation of its leading pair Endre (Géza Morcsányi) and Maria (Alexandra Borbély), audiences are left with little more than a humdrum sense of "meh."

But once that exposition is out of the way, and it's revealed that the two share the same dream, the duo begins to connect. Suddenly "On Body and Soul" finds its rhythm and becomes more precise with its ambitions and themes. What follows is a bizarre love story that becomes increasingly arresting, romantic, comical and suspenseful as Endre and Maria try to find out what's brought them together.

This foreign-language idiosyncratic love story may be shooting for an art house crowd (with the nominations to prove it), but any audience will appreciate it gets better and better with each passing minute. GREGORY WAKEMAN

Where to get takeout for the 2018 Super Bowl

Tacos, pizza and burgers, oh my!

JENNIFER LOGUE
jennifer.logue@metro.us

If the thought of a more chill 2018 Super Bowl experience appeals to you, perhaps you should just have a party and order takeout for your closest friends. After all, jam-packed bars aren't for everyone. Lucky for you, some of Philadelphia's most delicious restaurants are offering Super Bowl takeout specials to make Sunday's game even more memorable.

Here are a few of our top picks:

SLiCE
Who doesn't love pizza? It's easy to eat, easy to clean up and pairs perfectly with Philly's best local beers. SLiCE is known for delivering quality pizzas and has multiple locations throughout the area, making pickup and delivery easy as a "pizza" pie. Specials for the Super Bowl include a football-shaped Ultimate Eagles football pizza ($19), topped with San Marzano tomatoes sauce, mozzarella, hand sliced pepperoni and finished with ricotta laces. You can also take advantage of deals like The Tackle ($35), which includes 25 twice-cooked wings with choice of sauce, celery and blue cheese, and one large plain pie; The Field Goal ($55), 25 twice-cooked wings, celery and blue cheese, 15 mozzarella sticks and one large plain pie; The Touchdown ($85), 50 twice-cooked wings, celery and blue cheese and two large plain pie; and The Turf ($60), 25 twice-cooked wings, celery and blue cheese, 1 small Caesar salad and one large plain pie.

Carrot cake for a good cause at Ocean Prime

Help end childhood hunger all next week.

JENNIFER LOGUE
jennifer.logue@metro.us

Have your cake and help kids in need, too, at Ocean Prime. PROVIDED

National Carrot Cake Day is Saturday, Feb. 3, and to celebrate, Philadelphia's Ocean Prime is donating $1 from every slice sold of its signature Ten Layer Carrot Cake ($11) to No Kid Hungry.

The ultradecadent dessert includes 10 layers of carrot cake slathered with cream-cheese icing. To top it all off? Pineapple syrup, whipped cream and mint.

From Feb. 3 through Feb. 9, you can order this dessert and support No Kid Hungry, a nonprofit committed to ending childhood hunger.

"We are excited to again partner with No Kid Hungry and support such an important cause," says Tricia Finke, General Manager. "We have extended the Ten Layer Carrot Cake promotion this year from a day to a week in hopes of significantly increasing our donation."

According to No Kid Hungry, 1 in 6 kids will face hunger this year. The organization helps kids start the day off with a healthy breakfast and teaches families how to shop and cook on a budget.

Each $1 donated from cake sales represents 10 meals for kids.

"We are excited to team up with Ocean Prime in the effort to end child hunger," says Diana Hovey, Senior Vice President at No Kid Hungry. "The No Kid Hungry campaign has connected kids with over 775 million meals and with the help of Ocean Prime, we can make no kid hungry a reality in the U.S."

Ocean Prime is located at 124 S. 15th St.

What's Graham watching and Kendricks missing at the Super Bowl?

Some athletes have particular ways of handling pressure before big games. GETTY IMAGES

What will the Eagles be doing Saturday night, the day before Super Bowl LII?

EVAN MACY

MINNEAPOLIS — Eagles fans will be struggling to sleep Satuday night. After all, the biggest game in the history of the franchise is Sunday. (We aren't including the Eagles' first two Super Bowl trips — both losses.)

It's been 52 years, and this year's squad can end the draught. So how are they handling the pressure? How will they get themselves to sleep the night before the game?

"The only thing that's not in my normal schedule is this media stuff," Mychal Kendricks said, talking to the media in a famously mandatory session Thursday, said. "And a steam room. I usually steam every day after practice and I haven't been able to do that."

Brandon Graham feels right at home and anticipates he'll be able to get his usual six or seven hours of sleep. He also plans to continue watching some of his favorite TV shows to calm him, mixing in some ESPN Sunday morning after he wakes up at 6:30 a.m.

"I am on 'Game of Thrones' now," Graham said. "I just started it. I loved 'The Wire.'"

It seems when the players are not arguing over whether Michael Jordan or LeBron James is the greatest basketball player of all time (yes, the players argue about it constantly), they are watching peak TV.

"I watch a lot of HBO," Jalen Mills said, "sit in my room listen to music, just to set a chill vibe."

Mills, who like all but seven Eagles is set to appear in his first career Super Bowl, is trying to keep himself focused on the Patriots and not on the big picture. Even when he walks onto the field at U.S. Bank Stadium, he isn't planning to take time to reflect. He's too busy for that.

"I had a guy ask me if it hit me yet," Mills said. "Usually it hits me more Saturday when you have that last meeting. I stick to my schedule, whatever I do in Philly during the season I do the same. I don't think I want to really embrace it until it's over."

As for head coach Doug Pederson — who turned 50 Wednesday — it's likely he will indulge in a bowl of ice cream.

"I love ice cream" the coach said, showing his slight potbelly to the assembled media. The coach apparently arranges for ice cream for the players and coaches each week as a tradition in the Eagles training facility. "I don't want to stay in meetings too long when there's ice cream over there melting," Pederson said.

Philadelphia prepares for the big game on Sunday

The Eagles are in Minnesota getting ready for the Super Bowl on Sunday, Feb. 4. But the rest of us back in Philly are just as affected by their every move as the city gears up for the big game.

To keep residents in the loop during the weekend of the Super Bowl, the office of Mayor Jim Kenney announced Thursday that residents can sign up for a special text message alert system.

Eagles fans celebrate the big win against the Minnesota Vikings. HUGHE DILLON

"In preparation for game day, residents and businesses can keep informed about developing Eagles information from the city, including transit and public safety details," the city said.

To sign up, text ReadyEagles to 888777.

To send your best wishes to the Birds from Philly, the city is advising using the #FlyPhillyFly hashtag to share "what makes Philadelphia and the Eagles so awesome," the city said, from restaurants and cultural opportunities to hidden neighborhood gems.

"With the team and management already in Minneapolis for the big game, we want to send them some brotherly and sisterly love from home," said City Rep. Sheila Hess, "as we cheer on our team and great city as the Eagles step into the international spotlight."

EAGLES FEVER

Here are some more ways Philly is showing Eagles fever:

- To celebrate the big game, Wawa will be offering free coffee on Feb. 4 until kickoff in Mid-Atlantic stores. They are also offering all Wawa classic hoagies for $4.99 through Feb. 4.

- MakeOffices, a co-working company, is offering a month's free co-working space.

- SEPTA employees will be wearing their Eagles gear in place of their usual uniforms.

SUPER BOWL COUNTDOWN

Even with 4.5 points in their favor, the Patriots are still a good bet to cover Sunday. GETTY IMAGES

Super Bowl LII: How to bet the big game

Two of the better bets in the NFL his year, the Eagles and the Patriots (-4.5), will collide in Minneapolis for Super Bowl LII this Sunday.

Philadelphia went 12-6 ATS this season, including two straight covers as an underdog in the playoffs. The trend is in their favor here, as underdogs have covered in 13 of the last 17 Super Bowls. The Eagles were responsible for one of those covers when they played New England in Super Bowl XXXIX, losing by three but staying within the seven-point cushion.

Philly will need a strong showing from their defense to keep themselves alive in this contest. This unit has obliged in the playoffs so far, as they limited the Falcons and Vikings to 17 combined points in two postseason tilts. However, both of those games were at home. The Eagles' defense was not a solid unit on the road this year, ranking 16th in PPG away from Lincoln Financial Field. They've also struggled in particular in the passing game, ranking 17th in YPG allowed through the air. That does not bode well when future Hall-of-Famer Tom Brady is the opposing quarterback.

Nick Foles will be forced to go toe-to-toe with Brady, and while he put on a clinic against the Vikings in the NFC Championship game (26-for-33, 352 yds, 3 TDs, 141.4 passer rating) that performance cannot be counted on again based on Foles' regular season passer rating (79.5).

New England, also 12-6 ATS this season, has been an excellent bet when favored by less than a touchdown. Per oddsshark.com, the Patriots have covered in their last 13 games when favored by seven or less, as they are here.

It's been widely proclaimed that this Patriots team is not as strong as those of the recent past. And while they do lack in some statistical categories, it's hard to argue with results.

The Patriots' defense, despite ranking 29th in YPG allowed this year, is fifth-best in PPG allowed. Meanwhile, it's been business as usual on the other side of the ball, as Brady continues to pick apart defenses with Rob Gronkowski (who is expected to play despite experiencing concussion-like symptoms after a hit to the head in the AFC Championship game) and Danny Amendola. Their second-rated passing attack matches up well with Philly's previously-mentioned pass stoppers. The Eagles' pass rush is not all that strong (38 regular season sacks, tied for 15th), so it seems Brady has an inside track to yet another Super Bowl win.

Prediction: Patriots 27 – Eagles 20

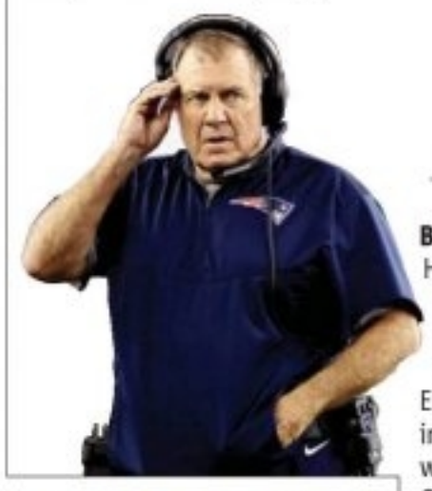
SUPER BOWL COUNTDOWN

Guide: Super Bowl LII's best prop bets

It's always better when there's money involved. That's why we love fantasy football so much. And why so many office hold block pools where each participant gets a combination of digits for the score. Sunday, when things kick off at 6:30 p.m. on NBC (or even before, when Pink sings the National Anthem), there are more things to root for than just the final score. Here's a look at some of the best prop bets for Super Bowl LII, and how we would bet them (all odds based on Bet SDI Sportsbook). EVAN MACY

Pink national anthem length:
This bet looks to be a sure fire over. Last year the over/under was at 2:09 and this year it's at just two minutes. There will be a big military jet flyover, a lot of pomp and circumstance on the field and her timing will need to be spot on, implying she'll sing slowly.
Out pick: Over 2:00 (+140)

ILLUSTRATIONS BY BILLY BECERRA



Bill Belichick's hoodie:
He is indoors at U.S. Bank Stadium. He hasn't worn a hoodie as often this year. Reports from Patriots faithful show that New England fans are very interested in their coaches attire. Afterall, wearing red against the Giants resulted in a loss. While there are lots of bets regarding what color said hoodie might be, We think this one is an easy bet. He'll wear something different.
Our pick: No (-115)

LeGarrette Blount scores first touchdown
Blount is a former Patriot and is going to play hard against his old team. He is a touchdown machine and will be getting goalline carries Sunday. The Patriots have never scored a first quarter touchdown in a Super Bowl with Tom Brady as quarterback. This is a great bet with a great payout.
Our pick: Blount scores (+850)

Will there be an N'SYNC reunion?
We already analized rumors that Justin Timberlake — the Super Bowl halftime performer — would reunite with his former boy bandmates during the performance. Joey Fatone is inexplicably in Minneapolis for gods sake! The betting language says "will any member of N'SYNC appear on stage. Get ready for some Dirty Pop.
Our pick: Yes (+150)

Zach Ertz receptions vs. Jordan Spieth birdies
Somehow, the geniuses in Vegas always come up with really compelling cross-sport bets. The Waste Management Phoenix Open is always a low-scoring affair, with their stadium par three and drivable par four down the stretch at TPC Scottsdale. Jordan Spieth, a favorite in the event, will likely post somewhere between 4-to-8 birdies in the final round of the tournament. Eagles tight end Ertz, in our estimation, will lead the Eagles in receptions. We're picking him for this bet.
Our pick: Ertz catches (-160)

Al Michaels says "underdog"
Michaels is NBC's play-by-play man and the Eagles' biggest storyline this postseason has been their success as underdogs. Fans will be wearing dog masks. The payout isn't great but the payout is all but guaranteed.
Our pick: Yes (-1,000)

ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES UNLESS OTHERWISE STATED

Tom Brady for MVP
Brady is the Super Bowl MVP favorite, and it would take a $130 bet to win $100. While the odds for the field are tantalizing (Alshon Jeffery pays $3,000 on a $100 bet), Brady has won four of five Super Bowl MVPs in addition to the five titles he has won. He willl also be the best and most experienced player on the field Sunday (who cares if he's 40-years-old?
Our pick: No. 4 for No. 12 (-130)

Quarter with the most points
The Patriots are notorious — particularly in the playoffs with Brady at the helm — for scoring late. In nearly all of their Super Bowls, they did most of their damage int he second half or fourth quarter, most memorably last year's record-setting comeback against the Falcons. The Eagles also are a late-scoring team, posting the sixth-most points in the fourth quarter in the regular season (7.6 per game).
Our pick: The fourth (+170)

Former Eagle Ryans called Eagles Super Bowl berth

Mychal Kendricks says his former Eagles teammate told him they were good enough in Week 8.

evan.macy@metro.us

Former Eagles linebacker DeMeco Ryans predicted the Eagles would be playing on Super Sunday GETTY IMAGES

MINNEAPOLIS — The Eagles are playing in the Super Bowl on Sunday, and few predicted that they would.

Even the players themselves seem not to have known exactly how good they actually were until different parts of the regular season.

For linebacker Mychal Kendricks, it was relatively early.

"I feel like we always knew we were gonna be here," Kendricks, who beat his brother Eric in the NFC Championship, said. "We played Kansas City [in Week 2], when we lost, we were like 'see you guys in the championship,' straight up."

Kendricks was wrong about the Chiefs, who lost in the first round of the playoffs to the Titans in dramatic fashion.

His confidence was strengthened as the season went on, particularly after the Eagles walloped the 49ers in Week 8.

"When we beat San Francisco, DeMeco Ryans came up to me and told me 'you guys are going to the Super Bowl,'" Kendricks said of the veteran linebacker. "He's been in the league, he understand the level of talent and he played on the team. He's familiar with everything. When he told me that, I was like 'damn, even he see's what we know.' Other people see it too."

For rookie Rasul Douglas, who saw his playing time at cornerback dwindle after Ronald Darby returned healthy, it was a bit different. He said he didn't think the Eagles were a Super Bowl contender when he was drafted in April — but that quickly changed.

"Watching the Eagles last year, 7-9 and about three or four of those games they lost on the last drive, you knew they were a good team," Douglas said. "They added pieces like Alshon [Jeffery], Torrey [Smith], Jay [Ajayi], and you knew anything could happen.

"We played against some good teams, we knew could do something special, it's up to us. Everyone came closer together, week by week, and we got stronger."

Aries When it comes to contracts, legal matters, money and health, you are best off listening carefully. Someone will mislead you or withhold information.

Taurus Listen and learn. You will pick up valuable information that will help you outmaneuver someone trying to lead you in a direction that would be costly financially.

Gemini Do your own thing. Learn from experience and stay focused on making changes that will help you be the best you can be. Don't give in to emotional manipulation.

Cancer Home, family and personal relationships should be your top priorities. Make plans that will bring you closer to loved ones. Share your insights.

Leo Deception is apparent when it comes to how you handle your money. Don't let your generosity overpower reason. Concentrate on making money, not on spending it.

Virgo Do your best to help the other people in your life. Exhibit understanding and offer kindness and solutions that will encourage others to take greater initiative.

Libra Keep your secrets tucked away someplace safe. Someone will pry into your personal affairs if you aren't careful. Look inward and make healthy lifestyle changes.

Scorpio You can be creative without breaking the bank. A moderate approach to what you want to pursue is a good place to start. Avoid temptation and indulgent behavior.

Sagittarius Emotional deception is apparent. Be realistic when it comes to acknowledging the limits of your capabilities. Don't take on something that will set you up for failure.

Capricorn Get your ducks in a row. Knowing where you stand legally or with regard to your health will help you make important decisions that will shape your future.

Aquarius A partnership will lack trust. Emotional manipulation or ulterior motives may help you initially, but in the end you will be exposed if you aren't honest and open.

Pisces Take the plunge and invest in yourself. Believe in your ability to create something unique. If you get the most for the least, success will be yours. EUGENIA LAST
